

Pupils take art to their heart

■ QUICK ON THE DRAW: A Whitehall Junior School pupil visiting Uxbridge High School draws himself

CHILDREN of all ages took part in The Big Draw, designed to get them to think about new ways of putting pen to paper.

Philip Newham, the Uxbridge High School art teacher who organised the event, now in its third year, described some of the artwork as "imaginative".

Nigel Clemens, senior vice principal at the school in The Greenway, said: "It was a delight to see students of all ages from a number of our feeder primary schools working together so harmoniously and with such excitement and enjoyment."

There were a range of activities available including sand sculpture, badge making, glow stick drawing and a giant Spirograph, all aimed at encouraging participants to open their minds to new ways of drawing.

The High School invited pupils from Whitehall Junior School, St Andrew's Primary and Cowley St Laurence Primary.