Government and Politics – Y12

COURSE INTRODUCTION

A-Level Government and Politics is designed to provide students with a deep understanding of the political structures and issues which inform our lives every day; the course will investigate British and American political ideas, processes, institutions and controversies and set them in a historical context. By the end of the course of study students will have developed a capacity for critical thinking, crucial evaluative skills and an ability to synthesize different arguments and perspectives. Moreover, students will also have gained a valuable insight into their rights, roles and responsibilities as citizens and both the opportunities and threats which are currently present within Anglo-American democracy. This is a course which invites pupils to think, debate and discuss as well as honing key writing skills.

Task to be completed

1. Purchase necessary materials to get off to a flying start with your A-Level Government and Politics course, this should include: An Arch-Bind folder, Plastic Wallets, Dividers (different colours are useful), Stationery, A4 lined paper pad.
2. Research and choose to listen to at least one political podcast and one political radio/TV programme. The A-Level Government and Politics course is all about connecting theory and ideas to political processes and institutions, as well as the context. Politics is all around us and it changes every day, staying up-to-date and aware about current affairs is crucial as they will provide some of the case studies for our course.
3. Choose two of the books from the reading list (or choose other equally relevant books) and read them over the summer. They can form the basis for some of our early discussions.
4. Start to investigate what your personal opinions are on political issues, the course is going to provide plenty of opportunity for healthy and respectful debate and discussion so make sure you feel ready to contribute. The link below is a (fun) but also quite informative way of working out some of your views on politics (don't worry, views and opinions are rarely set in stone...): <https://www.politicalcompass.org/>
